Misoponus, Gr. μισοπος. He that hates labour.

Missa, x, fœm. i. missio, sic dicta quia interjiciebatur inter duas missas sive missiones, Catechumenorum & Initiatorum: vel quia antiqui celebrabatur. Cœna Dominica ex donis à populo missis, Voss. Quidam à Mittendo, i. dimittendo: al. à Deo mihusa. Vide Polid. Virgil. al. à manere sive oblatione, quæ manu offertur. Sed magis probabile est transisse originem suam hanc vocem ex Catechumenorum Emergentium & Penitentium dimissione, antequam sacerdos Mysterium, cui interesse haudquaquam licebat, illis audiretur. Nam Diaconus solebat dicere, he, missa est. i. Dimissio est, ut licet, ite licet. Ab ea itaque dimissione tandem vulgus Cœna Dominicæ attribuit appellationem Missa. Al. volunt dict. Missam quæ transmissum, quod populus per sacerdotis ministerium, qui vice mediatoris fungitur inter Deum & homines, preces, votis, oblationesque Deo transmittat. Al. Missam dictam volunt à Mittendo; vel quod tanquam hostia in cœlum mittitur, vel quod Christiani singuli ad Altare panem suum consecrandum per manus ministrorum mittebant. Al. à contributione Eleemolynarum, quæ olim fieri solebat in celebratione Cœnæ Dominicæ: ut quippe collectis dici solitum, ite, missa est. i. Collecta Eleemolynæ. Al. ite, missa est, i. Remissio peccatorum certis votis annuntiata est. Alii aliter in re, jam per abusum abominanda, ridiculè interpretantur. Originally, it is the calling together of the faithful to service, Ambr. Cassian. Afterwards it signified the same with Liturgia. The Church-service. But now the Papists have appropriated it to their Mass. Also a woman-messenger.
